

According to The Journal of Couple and Relationship Therapy, almost HALF of married women and 60 percent of married guys will have an extramarital affair at some point in their marital relationship. When you think about that these stats are nearly double exactly what they were a brief 10 years earlier, clearly this is beyond a problem; it is now commonplace. But it's far from a surprise; it was anticipated. Futurist Alvin Toffler composed the very best seller Future Shock in 1970, and with matter-of-fact conviction he composed of "short-term marriages"- youths's first marital relationships, lasting 3 months to three years- and of "serial marital relationships" that would happen after the dissolution of the "trial marriage" at specific turning points in individuals's lives. Marriage is not the issue. Marriage is a spiritual and/or legal binding of two individuals .. however if dedication isn't there and loyalty becomes a matter of subjectivity or convenience, the marriage is currently nonexistent.
